Homecoming spirit alive at FAU

By WAYNE LOCKWOOD
Sun News Editor

FAU's first homecoming in its 25 year history came to a spectacular close last Saturday night in the FAU Gymnasium with the Owl basketball team's crushing 85-44 victory over Emory Riddle University.

Before the game, a bonfire was lit behind the gym, and a steel drum band played to a crowd of spirited Owl fans.

Earlier that same day, student built floats traveled down Lee street behind Fleming Hall to the gym, piloted by festive students letting loose in FAU's first ever homecoming parade.

"We had a real good time, and for a 'first-time-ever' parade, it went very well," said Roger Del-Papa, assistant to the Student Body President and one of the organizers of Homecoming week. "We didn't have much spectator support, but things can only get better next year."

"Next year, we're going to work a little closer with the Alumni Association," said Mariann Rowland, Student Body President.

"We're all in favor of Homecoming," said James Spear, assistant to the University President

Will there even be a homecoming next year? Del-Papa seems to think so.

"We are dedicated to doing this again. I know I'll be there," said DelPapa.

Correction

In Monday's issue, Pi Lambda Phi, Alpha Tau Omega, the Pan African Students Association, and Alpha Epsilon Pi were mistakenly reported as having taken first, second, third and fourth places respectively in the FAU olympics.

The actual results were: Alpha Tau Omega, first place; the Pan African Students Association, second place; Pi Lambda Phi, third place; College of Engineering, fourth place.

FAU founding father dies

By DAVID E. KIDD
Sun News Editor

FAU lost one of its most beloved and dedicated faculty last Friday, November 17.

Dr. Robert H. Miller, professor of business law and former vice president of Administrative Affairs, died suddenly of a heart attack at his home in Boca Raton.

"His attitude toward teaching was not just reading out of a book, but rather citing situations that would apply to us on a day to day basis," said Kimberly Ann Goetz, a student of Miller's. "He will be sorely missed."

To many business student's, the 70 year old professor will be remembered as one of the toughest in the college of business.

"He was probably the hardest professor in the college, but he was very well liked by his students," said Elizabeth Johnston, a former student of Miller's.

"He demanded respect, and he got it. I thought he was the greatest," said student Karen Parks. "He was tough, but he was fair."

One of Miller's responsibilities was to get FAU's accounting students ready for the legal portion of the CPA exam.

This past year, FAU had a higher percentage of it's undergraduate accounting students pass the CPA exam on the first try than any other undergraduate institution in the country, and its scores on the legal section of the test were also first in the country.

But Miller's accomplishment's went far beyond the classroom and academia.

Miller received his bachelor's and masters of law from Indiana University, attended the United States Military Academy at West Point, and also attended George Washington University.

He was trained as a navigator and flew 30 combat missions in the European Theatre of Operations in WWII and earned the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal with four Oak Leaf Clusters, and attained the rank of permanent colonel, U.S. Air Force, in 1960.

During the Cuban Missile Crisis, Miller was the senior legal officer for all Air Force and Army Forces in Florida.

He was a member of the bar of both the Supreme Court of Indiana and the U.S. Supreme Court.

Miller became FAU's business manager in 1963. He was promoted to dean of administrative affairs in 1965, and to vice president, a post he held for 12 years, in 1967.

In 1979, Miller resigned his administrative post to teach in FAU's college of business.

"He just completed a book on the history and development of the University, which is basically the story of FAU as told by its founders," said Stanley Hille, dean of the college of business.

"This is a guy with not only great classroom skills, but he often helped students with finding a career," Hille continued.

"I've only been here a year and a half, but the thing I liked about him most was that despite the fact that he was 70, he approached everything he did with great enthusiasm," said Hille.

Funeral services were held earlier this week and Miller will be buried at Arlington National Cemetery.

Wanted: Exotic parties at FAU

Food Service America (FSA) is still not listening to the complaints of student organizations. Why is it absolutely necessary that all food be purchased through the FAU dining services at outrageous prices? For the same amount of money it is costing these organizations to purchase soda, hot dogs, and hamburgers, they could go to Publix and buy lobster, shrimp and Dom Perignon. The idea has arisen that student organizations should start taking action since Mr. Lee Burrows and Mr. Dan Kishbaugh obviously refuse to make any significant changes in the contact to accommodate these clubs. If those two were not so stubborn and greedy, such rebellion would not be necessary.

Since organizations are paying top rate for party supplies and food, it should be expected that the parties be first rate. Wrong. Students are still stuck eating hamburgers and potato chips while sipping on Diet Coke. Let's make FAU parties exotic! Let's make them classy! Let's throw parties that Burrows and Kishbaugh cannot provide the food for. Why not, it will still cost the same amount of money. The time has arrived where the only possible solution for justice is to eliminate this so called "catering service" from FAU.

No classes open

It is a dirty trick. Offering required classes, which seniors need to graduate, only at the Broward and Commercial campuses as a way to increase student enrollment is pretty sneaky. We need those classes here in Boca Raton; students do not have the time nor the energy (some don't have the cars or the money) to get to those campuses. There is a scheduling problem at FAU which needs immediate attention. Offer the needed classes at the main campus year round so seniors have the opportunity to graduate!

Almost all of the classes in the College of Humanities are closed. Many of the Gordon Rule courses have been taken. Language and English classes are already filled. Most of the courses were closed on the third day of advanced registration. There are definitely not enough classes at FAU. There are more and more majors and less and less faculty. This situation should not penalize the student. FAU keeps accepting more students every year; the number of classes should keep up with the number of students being accepted. Students are required to take specific classes in order to graduate, however, they are finding out that such classes are either closed or don't exist at FAU.

The classes are closing out faster than one can blink an eye. It is almost not worth the effort to run all over campus looking for an advisor, then to registrar to find out that the classes have already been closed, back to an advisor, then to some department head, who sends students back to Administration. Students are finding that they cannot even get into the classes that they don't need let alone the classes that are required. Then there are those students who truly believe that there are ways around the system. Not here at FAU. Try overriding a class and guaranteed some administrator will accuse you of forging a professor's signature.

At present time there are only a few alternatives to get into the necessary classes needed to graduate: take the time to travel to the Davie or Commercial campuses or, as one department chairperson put it, "transfer to UF."

Letters to the Editor

Adoption not murder

Your article of November 6 (Democracy: Free Choice?) gives a rather superficial interpretation of Bush's veto of federal funding for abortion and the consequences of this policy.

First of all, Bush's veto simply preserves the status quo; federal funds are not currently available for abortions in the cases of rape and incest. Consequently, this veto does not "create" a vicious circle and does not constitute a new situation in our society.

The question of federal funding for abortions is a subset of the whole abortion problem. This is not part of the fundamental question regarding the ethical nature of abortion. Even if abortion were licit, it's clear that no one is "entitled" to have the government pay for abortion simply because there are no laws prohibiting it. We are all "free" to travel to Europe, but that doesn't entitle us to a government subsidy. Furthermore, since abortion is the taking of a human life, taxpayers should not be forced to pay for them. I claim the right not to choose murder.

It should also be noted that no one is "forced" to raise a child. Babies should be put up for adoption rather than put to death. Most people do not consider abortion to be an ideal solution and in a perfect world, abortion would not be perceived as necessary. Our energies should be directed toward finding alternatives to abortion, rather than propagating myths about abortion.

President's Corner

A Message from MARIANN ROWLAND Student Body President

As some of you are aware I used to write the President's Corner when the Atlantic Sun was not independent. Upon student request, I'm back. So let's get to business.

Florida Student Association (FSA), the lobby group for the students of the Florida University System which includes FAU, has come up with a stance regarding this next year's tuition. Typically, FSA has lobbied to keep tuition increases as low as possible. This year however, FSA has taken a different approach. At last week's FSA meeting, which I did not attend because of Homecoming (I now regret not going), it was proposed that FSA would go for an 8% tuition increase for in-state students and an 18% increase for out-of-state students. That's right, no typo-18%!

The Monday after the FSA meeting I contacted Barbara Bowden Foley (Staff for FSA) to inquire what happened at the meeting. Boy, was I shocked to hear the results.

She gave me justification for the proposal (which was voted upon unanimously by those present). It goes something like this: The increase would roughly generate $11 million more educational dollars which is desperately needed because of educational budget cuts and the lottery not doing what it was intended to do. Also, according to a survey of some other states, Florida has a low out-of-state tuition and a low percentage of out-of-state students.

That's all great and good; but it doesn't make sense to me. First of all, lottery money was supposed to enhance education. What has happened is that the budget was cut and lottery money made up for that cut. So we are in the same place as before. Secondly, so what if Florida's out-of-state tuition is lower than other states? This should be used to attract out-of-state students to come to Florida.

Finally, and most important to me, is the fact that FAU has been getting the short end of the deal for years! FAU was granted Broward County and a new Campus had to open in Davie; on top of that, FAU was cut by over $4 million dollars by the Governor. Budget cuts have been made in all of the colleges of FAU in order to handle this.

FAU has approximately 10 percent out-of-state students. If I could be guaranteed that FAU would get its fair share back from this proposed FSA tuition stance, I would seriously consider the proposal. But this money will go into one big pot and be dished out from there. Believe me, FAU's dish is empty.

I cannot in good conscience allow FAU students to pay such a large increase and not guarantee that they will see results and improvements from it. It is time to take a stand!

I need to hear from YOU! The stance I take depends on you. I simply want to know how you feel! So pick up the phone and call, 367-3740 or 367-3746 (after 6 pm call 736-9813). Leave a message with Mariann and state:

Yes, I agree with the 18% increase for out-of-state students or:

No, I do not agree with the 18% increase for out-of-college state tuition.

This matter definitely affects you!

Berlin wall: new dawn or another political trick?

By JAIME SANCHEZ-BIANCHI
Student Contributor

It has been a long time since the construction of the Berlin Wall. Now it is a remnant of our frivolous past. Perhaps it is the first step in opening up further relations between East and West. As of November 9, 1989, the horrid memory of the Berlin Wall crumbled to an end. The East German government announced the opening of its borders to the world; and with it came a new set of policies; policies ready to dismantle that dreaded physical barrier that separated an entire nation.

The East German borders are now open. Thousands of East German citizens are lining up to obtain exit visas to the West in search for better living standards. There was joy and celebration in the streets of Berlin, and the many check point posts were no longer a deterrent for many East Germans. But has this new maneuver by the East German government constituted the beginning of a new dawn, or is it just another political trick manipulated by the Soviets to keep East Germans from fleeing the country.

To the eyes of many people, the opening of East Germany's borders signifies a big step in achieving political stability and economic freedom for Eastern Europe, but to others it constitutes a move by the East German government to keep East Germans from illegally fleeing the country. One question needs to be answered: Is West Germany ready to cope with the incoming flow of newcomers, and is the proper West German economy going to suffer from a surplus labor force, pumping the unemployment rate higher or raising the inflationary index to four digit numbers like in Brazil?

Perhaps now that East Germany has opened its doors to the world, many East Germans would be tempted to leave so desperately. It is East Germany's incipient economy that is going to suffer.

After the defeat of Nazi Germany, there was fear amongst the super powers that Germany would rise from its ashes. The fear of endangering world peace became the utmost priority concern for the super powers. They agreed not to allow Germany to rebuild its economy or government framework, and Germany was divided among the powers into two areas. One area was under the tutelage of the Allied forces: Americans, British, and French. The other sector was under Soviet control, becoming the buffer zone between them and the West. Europe after World War II was divided by the ideologies of the times, regions east of latitude 10 north, with the exception of Italy, were under Soviet control.

Well, it has been a long time since the ending of World War II; the time has come to implement new changes in Eastern Europe. Perestroika or no Perestroika, Glasnost or no Glasnost, East Germany is on its way to true freedom; a freedom to economic and social prosperity; and freedom to political reform; a freedom to choose your way of life. No longer will East Germans have to give account of their actions to the Government; no longer will East Germans be restricted on their buying power; no longer will East Germans be held by the KGB without having constitutional rights.

will become part of one nation, a dream that many thought to be inconceivable. But is the unification of 20th century Germany something that will bring benefit and prosperity and not conflict and possibly another global war. If Germany is to be unified, it must achieve it in a gradual manner.

West Germany today holds the fourth largest economy in the world, if and when she reunites with her sister nation, East Germany, both will constitute the largest and most powerful economic power in Europe, even surpassing the Soviets. It is in their best interest to start the process of unification at once. This will serve as an example for other Soviet orbit nations, that to claim freedom is a natural given right. It will convey to the nations of the world that the only way to achieve economic prosperity, social stability, and political freedom is by having a democratic system that works.

The prospects for the future of the European continent have been enlightened by the opening of East German's borders, and in time, if not sooner, many Soviet orbit countries will follow, opening up to the West. It is a remote thought for many of us that by the end of the 20th century, perhaps Eastern Europe would have assimilated into one unified continent. That not only the two Germanies are unified, but that the entire European continent stands as one solid nation.

Sanchez-Bianchi is a senior majoring in Political Science

"East Germany is on its way to true freedom; a freedom to economic and social prosperity; a freedom to political reform; a freedom to choose your own way of life."

The first step in reunification of the two Germanies has taken place, the borders are now open. Soon the Berlin Wall will become part of a museum; a museum bearing the pains and blood of many East Germans that attempted to cross the West. It is in the midst of this nostalgic encounter that East Germany

ENTERTAINMENT

Dr. Dirty "insults" the Rat crowd

By MITCHELL P. ALBERT
Sun Managing Editor

Owl Growl is here! Forget about "Gay-Tor" Growl. If this past Thursday was a preview of what is about to come, then their is no need to travel North anymore for your Homecoming entertainment.

Student Government Program Board brought for your pleasure, John Valby, or by his alias, "Dr. Dirty." Valby has performed his off color humor long before Eddie Murphy, Richard Pryor, or Andrew Dice Clay. He has performed on college campuses for over 20 years, and is banned from several campuses as well.

You see, Valby comes on stage to a round of expletives that cannot be written in this paper. He tickles the ivories and out of his mouth comes filth you would not believe. I said to myself, I wonder how many times his mother washed his mouth out with soap???

My favorite song that the "Doctor" did was "Hey Yaddi Laddi Laddi," possibly because he picked me out of the crowd twice to abuse me. He did other favorites such as "Supercalifragilisticexpialidocious," "Barnicle Bill the Sailor," "Knock Knock," and of course "Puff the Magic Tampon." Valby is very quick with his wit. A student would scream out a name and before you could repeat it, a rhyme was bellowing through the joint.

The audience convulses with laughter as Dr. Dirty does his shtick at the Rat last Thursday night. Due to obscenity laws, we cannot show Dr. Dirty's photo.

When the show first started, the look on some of the Rat patrons was one of astonishment. As the evening progressed, everyone seemed to get into the groove. It was a real pleasure to watch "Dr. Dirty," it was just the release I needed during a hectic Homecoming week. Besides how can you dislike a guy that uses the rhyme, "I once met a girl/her name was Gerolyn/She's so wide/you could fit a Root beer barrel in?"

The Stones invade the Orange Bowl

By SCOOTER LIVINGSTON
Sun Entertainment Editor

They came, they saw, they conquered.

The above sentence aptly describes the Rolling Stones as they performed two shows at The Orange Bowl November 15 and 16. Their two shows, performed before a combined crowd total of over 110,000 fans, was a mixture of most of their classics, along with several of their newer songs. This stop on their "Steel Wheels Tour" also marked the first time in their touring career that they have ever played in the Miami/Ft. Lauderdale area.

The crowd was mixed, with the fans in attendance ranging from their teens to in their 50s, showing the appeal of Mick and the boys through the generations. One woman, who appeared to be in her early 40s, said that she jumped at the chance to stand in line to get tickets for her children's babysitter, getting seats for herself and her husband in the process. She also said that this was the first time she had seen the Stones, although she had been a fan of theirs for years. I saw one man who appeared to be around 55 wearing a Stones T-shirt with his grandchildren, the oldest around 7, also wearing a Stones shirt.

Living Colour opened up the evening's festivities at 7:30 sharp with their brand of Rock with a trace of Funk in it. There was also a trace of what Jimi Hendrix might have sounded like if he was still around. What the crowd couldn't see on stage was compensated for by the wide-screen TVs on each side of the stage. Living Colour's set was well appreciated by the crowd, especially when they performed the Clash's "Should I Stay Or Should I Go," performed at a half speed thrash rate, a number that they performed as their finale. Living Colour received an ovation from the crowd, including this reporter. Living Colour's performance justified my faith in the Stones' choosing them as their opening act. I have a feeling that it won't be long before Living Colour will be the main act in concert.

After Living Colour's set, there was an intermission of over an hour to set up the stage for the Stones. There seemed to be anticipation in the air as the Orange Bowl waited for the Main Event.

The lights in the Bowl went out, music from Bizet's Carmen filled the air, and the blue lights on the steel girders went on. The crowd started going wild as smoke started pouring out of the tubes over the stage, accented by orange lights. Suddenly, blinding flares lit up the stage and the song "Start Me Up" rang through the stadium. This was no tape, the show was on!

The crowd was singing along without missing a beat as Mick strutted on stage in his green velvet jacket. "Bitch" then followed, with the onstage lights changing color, an effect that continued throughout the show.

Jagger picked up a guitar for "Sad Sad Sad," and held on to it for "Undercover Of the Night," with the giant video screens interspersing pictures of victims of political repression with the live shots of the show. Charlie Watts drumming was underscored by strobe lights on each side of the stage.

"The Harlem Shuffle," the great cover of the 1962 hit by Bob and Earl, marked the appearance of backup singers Lisa Gibson, Cindy Finch and Clint Fowler on stage. Their vocals were well performed and added the extra power to the numbers. "Tumbling Dice" was next, with Gibson, Finch, and Fowler's vocals prominent.

Jagger picked up his guitar again for "Miss You," which featured strong work from sax player Bobby Keys. As "Ruby Tuesday" was performed, everybody in the OB sang along, and at that point, it wasn't the Stones' show, it was the crowd's. The softer vein continued with "Angie," a tune that received excellent crowd response.

The Stones moved from the old to the new with "Rock And A Hard Place" and "Mixed Emotions," with the spotlights splaying over the crowd during the latter.

The highlight of the show then occurred as "Honky Tonk Women" was performed. Two gigantic inflatable women appeared on either side of the stage, driving the crowd into a frenzy. Jagger danced along the 250 foot wide stage, pretending to make conversation with the two dolls, running up and down the catwalks on either side of them. Mick picked up the Blues Harp for "Midnight Rambler," blowing some mean licks.

Jagger made one request of the crowd before the next song, that they all sing along. They did, as "You Can't Always Get What You Want" was done. The Stones then reached way back to their first LP for "Little Red Rooster."

Stones do a mixture of the old and the new

STONES/from p.7

Keith Richard then took center stage for "Can't Be Seen With Ya," and "Happy," showing that he too could sing. Jagger came back for "Paint It Black," but the treat for this reporter was the performance of "2000 Light Years From Home," complete with special effects on the video screens. It segued into "Sympathy For The Devil," complete with flames shooting out over the stage. Jagger was dancing all over the stage, including the catwalks.

"Gimme Shelter" featured strong supporting vocals from Gibson, as she and Mick belted the song out with intensity. "It's Only Rock And Roll" followed, complete with a video montage of Rock stars from the past, a nice touch and tribute to Rock and Roll.

Keys' sax was the main attraction in "Brown Sugar," highlighting his first rate playing throughout the show. "Satisfaction" featured another massive crowd sing-along. That appeared to be the last song of the night. Or was it?

The stadium lights went out, but the lights along the steel girders next to the stage stayed lit, so the crowd knew that there was still more to come. Suddenly, sparks started flying all around the stage, the lights went up, and their patented encore, "Jumping Jack Flash" started up. Mick was now wearing a King's cape, and he was regarded as a king by the crowd, as he ran up the catwalk again, along with a fireworks display that drove the crowd into a frenzy.

At the conclusion, all of the boys came to the front of the stage, bowing to the crowd, drinking in the cheers of the Orange Bowl. Jagger threw roses into the crowd, and as the left the stage for the final time, the strains of Carmen could be heard again, along with another fireworks display, thus ending the evening "with a bang."

For a bunch of guys pushing 50, the Stones certainly didn't act it. When I saw them in 1975, they certainly were lively, and although the video screens did show the lines on Mick's face, they still played with the intensity they've shown over the years. Geritol time? Don't you believe it!

Another similarity from 1975 was that although their set was longer back then, the stage was immense (for that time and the confines of the Boston Garden), and the theatrics were unique then. For instance, in '75, when they performed "Star Star," a giant "organ" came up through the stage, and when they did "...Flash," a dragon came up and spat confetti at the crowd. This time, we had the pyrotechnics and the greater freedom of an outdoor stage.

Many fans had nothing but praise for the Stones and their performance. One concert-goer, Dan from Boynton Beach, summed it up like this: "The Stones weren't going to be left behind by anyone. They lived up to their rep. When I saw the Who, I was disappointed. The Stones were much better." His companion, Lynn, added "they were just great!" Another fan, Jonathan from Miami, said "I never thought I'd ever see the Stones, but hey, I saw them!"

As a person who has seen the Stones before, albeit a fourteen year hiatus between shows, my personal view was that like fine wine, the Stones get better with age. Twenty years from now, I have a feeling that they'll still be rocking! Of course, you know I'll be there!

US qualifies for 1990 World Cup; first time in 40 years

By SCOOTER LIVINGSTON
Sun Entertainment Editor

Paul Caliguiri scored the only goal the US Nationals needed as they defeated Trinidad/Tobago 1-0 Sunday in Port Of Spain. Caliguiri's goal came at the 31 minute mark, assisted by former Miami Shark Tab Ramos. The US will now participate in Italy in the 1990 World Cup for the first time since the 1950 Cup in Brazil where the US shocked the soccer world by defeating England 1-0, a game that is still talked about almost 40 years later.

In a tune-up match held last week in Cocoa, the US defeated Jamaica 2-1, with one of the US goals being scored by Margate native and Fort Lauderdale Striker Eric Eichmann. The game was played as a "practice" match for the US, as Jamaica was eliminated from the CONCACAF (North, Central America, and Caribbean Region) round-robin tournament last year.

It was a must-win situation going into Sunday's match. With one remaining spot in the CONCACAF region up for grabs between the US and Trinidad/Tobago, the US had to win to qualify for Italy. Costa Rica had already won the CONCACAF group, while the US and Trinidad/Tobago were both tied for second in the final round with a record of 3-1-3, although Trinidad/Tobago had the edge in goal differential.

Back in May, both teams met in Fenton, Missouri, and the result was a 1-1 tie, a score that loomed as a albatross over the US team's heads. Last month's scoreless tie with El Salvador, the team that finished winless in the tournament also caused some consternation among the US team. A tie or loss Sunday would have eliminated the US until 1994, when they will automatically qualify as the host nation.

Nations that have qualified for the Cup include Argentina (defending champion), Italy (host nation), USA, Costa Rica, Ireland, Scotland, Yugoslavia, Brazil, Colombia, England, Austria, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, West Germany, Holland, Uruguay, Scotland, Romania, Spain, USSR, Sweden, South Korea, Egypt, Cameroon and the United Arab Emirates. The draw to determine the Cup match-ups will take place in Rome on December 12.

The US isn't favored to get past the first round next June, but for the US to make it to the 1990 Cup is similar to the 1980 US hockey team in Lake Placid. It will be interesting to see if there is a US/USSR matchup in Italy next year.

Qualifying in 1990, hosting in 1994. Soccer has finally arrived in America!

Owls scorch Eagles, 85-44 in first ever homecoming game

By BRUCE GOTTESMAN
Student Contributor

With a new coach, four new players, and a new attitude, the FAU men's basketball team provided something for everyone as they defeated Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University, 85-44, in their opening game Saturday.

You like offense? The Owls shot .607 from the floor, including an eight-of-12 performance by senior forward Daryl Kanning. Kanning finished with a game-high 19 points.

You like defense? The visiting Eagles only shot .250 for the game. During a ten-minute period in the first half, the Owls held Embry Riddle without a single point.

You like physical play? Kanning pulled down four offensive rebounds in a row early in the second half.

"It was a little luck," Kanning said. "The atmosphere is a lot more relaxed with Coach [Tim] Loomis."

Loomis came to FAU from Penn State, where he was an assistant coach who helped guide the Nittany Lions to their best season ever.

"I thought our pressure hurt [Embry-Riddle] a lot," Loomis said. "We did a lot of good things. We executed well offensively."

The crowd of 850 sounded more like 8500 most of the night. With the game coming right after FAU's first homecoming parade, school spirit was high.

"The crowd today was great," said senior center Ingo Wolf, who had seven points, nine rebounds, and four blocks.

The Owls fell behind 6-4 in the opening three minutes, missing several shots. FAU poured it on for the next ten minutes, causing eleven turnovers and scoring 22 straight points. Sophomore Darrin Herrick had three steals which led to transition baskets.

The Owls coasted in the second half, shooting 65 percent from the floor. Kanning and Wolf dominated inside, relying on FAU's height advantage (Kanning is 6'6", Wolf is 6'11", and the tallest Eagle player is 6'4").

Donald Smith, a junior transfer from Broward Community College, started at the point for FAU. Smith finished with seven points and three assists.

"I think he did a good job," Loomis said. "He was a two-guard all his life and he's just learning the position."

Senior Ron McLin, who has been hampered by injuries all year, started and scored 11 points.

"Ron is day-to-day," Loomis said. "He said he wanted to play."

The Owls are in action tonight against Armstrong State at 7:30 at the FAU Gym.
